Keeping the FaithBy A CustomerThis important work is an unvarnished first-person account of one man's lifelong battle to secure rights for the mentally retarded citizens of Massachusetts. With no holds barred, Ricci chronicles the plight of the mentally retarded in Massachusetts during the second half of the twentieth century. In a style reflective of his unrelenting advocacy, Ricci recounts the painful decision he and his wife made to place their six-year-old son at Belchertown State School in the 1950s, the horrific medieval conditions he discovered and exposed in that institution, his founding of Advocacy Network, that organization's fight against uncaring state bureaucrats, and their hard-won, landmark federal court order to improve the lives of the mentally retarded. Crimes Against Humanity is a must-read for anyone with a social conscience.5 of 6 people found the following review helpful. My friend from belchertownBy Edwin B PowellKnowing someone who lived there and benefitted from the class action law suite was an eye opener. Truly a corragious book. Everyone should read this in junior high. A humbling experience. Thank you.

An accounting of the celebrated, historically significant and precedent-setting class action suit, Robert Simpson Ricci et. al., plaintiffs v. Milton Greenblatt, M.D. et. al., defendants was authored by Benjamin Ricci, retired professor emeritus, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, father and next friend of Robert Simpson Ricci principal plaintiff.

About the AuthorDr. Ricci has received numerous citations and commendations from all levels of government in the state of Massachusetts. In 1985, he was honored with the Humanitarian Award from the National Association of Superintendents of Public Residential Facilities for the Mentally Retarded. He has written several books and presented papers in the United States and Europe relating to health care improvement.
