From his touching personal journey, which is just a small part, to his challenge to the broken government that continues to betray citizens in favor of corporations. Mr Ockander shows poise and maturity. I will be writing in his name on the ballot come this election. I advise others to do the same. To be totally candid, I am quite sure our votes don't actually matter. The election is decided by corrupt representatives who are self serving. They continue to take rights and benefits from you but give themselves raises, immunity and take kickbacks and high paying jobs from corporations they provide godlike powers to. Writing in a real person will do no more good but at least you can look your loved ones in the eyes and say that you didn't do anything to make the world worse on election day. See if your views align with this brave patriot's and then start an open dialog with him and others on important issues facing our nation.

While you may not agree with some of his proposals, you will concur that America is in dire need of truthful trustworthy leaders; a reversal in regulations which usurp individual Rights harm small businesses; novel ideas to chronic problems. His book/planks are very easy to read. You won't find "politician-speak" language in it, just "plain English". It'd be great to share with friends this election year for their reaction and fresh debate! Mr Ockander would be great for the Constitution, Republican, or Libertarian Party or ,but any other Party might want to steal some of his appealing ideas!

That said, I haven't read the book but I have read his platform on his website, and it is clear he has little understanding of constitutional government. Those who salute his unconstitutional policies demonstrate the fundamental problem we have in American, the people don't know the law of the land. What a sad commentary on our time.
