From Brill - Nijhoff : Progress in International Law (Developments in International Law) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Progress in International Law (Developments in International Law):

Progress in International Law is a comprehensive accounting of international law for our times. Forty leading international law theorists analyze the most significant current issues in international law and their critical assessments draw diverse conclusions about the current state and future prospects of international law. The material is grouped under the headings: The History and Theory of International Law; The Sources of International Law and Their Application in the United States; International Actors; International Jurisdiction and International Jurisprudence; The Use of Force and the World's Peace; and The Challenge of Protecting the Environment and Human Rights. The book draws its inspiration from a similar survey undertaken in 1932 by Harvard Law Professor and PCIJ Judge Manley O. Hudson. In his book Progress in International Organization, Hudson sought to demonstrate that what he perceived as an emerging international infrastructure, and as moves toward the rule of law in international affairs, were sure signs of human progress towards peace and cooperation. Progress in International Law critically engages with that claim as a normative matter and, at the same time, presents the evidence by which a judgment about our own progress towards peace and cooperation might be judged.

"An absolutely first rate collection of provocative articles by leading scholars in the field. Miller and Bratspies introduce the volume with a fascinating study of international law in the United States after the First World War -- a moment parallel to our own. Then as now, international law was a collision point for political visions of America's role in the world. The field was remade, as it is being remade today by those who contribute to this excellent volume." David W. Kennedy Director, European Law Research Center Manley O. Hudson Professor of Law Harvard Law School "This fine collection ... in its near-comprehensive breadth, provides the raw material for another generation's imagining the progress of international law." Jose E. Alvarez Hamilton Fish Professor of International Law and Diplomacy and the executive director of the Center on Global Legal Problems at Columbia Law School; 2006-2008 President of the American Society of International Law About the Author Russell A.
